Procedure:

- Apply eye pads and more exfoliant to the skin, until the skin is saturated.
- You will need to have a sponge cut in half and dampened to hold skin taut as well as add moisture to skin.
- Using the large goat hair brush dip the brush tips into water and apply exfoliant to tips of brush.
- Turn brush machine on making sure that brush is turning in counter clockwise direction. This procedure is a light polish using upward and outward movements.
- Begin movement using brush machine on the chest.
- Using your dampened sponge hold skin taut as you start on the right side.

- Move upward using circular movements onto the neck (platysma), jaw (mandible), chin (mentalis), cheeks (zygomatic arches), temple and forehead (frontalis). Stop brush movement on center of forehead. Stop brush from turning before removing from forehead.

- Then reverse setting of brush to clockwise and repeat on left side with same procedure as right. Do not apply pressure. The brush should do the work.
- The bristles of the brush should remain straight.
- Once you have finished the left side, switch from large brush to small brush to work around the upper lip, nose and eye areas. Dampen the bristles before each use to soften the bristles. For dryer skin, use slow, steady motion. Thicker, oily skin can tolerate a faster speed.

- Begin your pattern at center of chin with small brush turning counter clockwise. Move to the lip, nose and eye area.
- You will then want to work your way around the outer perimeter of the face and end at the chin.
- Steam may be used depending on the type and condition of the skin.

- Remove the exfoliant with a warm towel following the Warm Towel Application and Removal skill.
